14 Describe the organizational action and, if applicable, the date of the action or the date against which shareholders' ownership is measured for the action ▶ On July 20, 2016 a one-for-one hundred reverse stock split occurred. Each one hundred shares of issued and outstanding common shares were converted into one newly issued and outstanding share of common stock. No fractional shares were issued in connection with the reverse stock split. Any fractional share of common stock that would otherwise have resulted from the reverse stock split was rounded up to the next whole share of common stock, if the fractional interest was equal to or greater than one-half of a share of common stock, and rounded down to the next whole share of common stock if the fractional interest was less than one-half of a share of common stock.

15 Describe the quantitative effect of the organizational action on the basis of the security in the hands of a U.S. taxpayer as an adjustment per share or as a percentage of old basis ▶ A shareholder will multiply the basis in each share held before the reverse stock split by 100 to determine the basis of a newly issued share after the reverse stock split.

16 Describe the calculation of the change in basis and the data that supports the calculation, such as the market values of securities and the valuation dates ▶ See item 15 above. Because no fractional shares were issued, the aggregate tax basis of common stock held immediately after the reverse stock split could be less than the pre-split aggregate tax basis by an amount equal to the aggregate tax basis allocated to a fractional share, if any.
